What with the almost inevitable quiet of the last months of an administration, the absence from the city or the mourning of several of the eading entertainers in private circles and other uncertain aspects, the coming winter season is not likely to be distractingly gay. Yet when a remark clothed in this rather doleful jumble of ideas was made the other day to a well-known society man he looked rather surprised as he answered, "Why not?"

While this condition of things is absolutely While this condition of things is absolutely true, a Washington season need not depend entirely on the same set of people year after year. There are always new people, and somehow or other always a charming contingent of strangers lured here every winter by the standard attractions that never grow dim. One need not be a millionaire to have the best possible kind of a time, and, in fact, while it is very nice, indeed, to be able to entertain on a magnificent scale, the wealthy folks are not always the enes who get the most satisfaction out of a Washington winter. So inter new around the enes who get the most satisfaction out of a ways the aitar were of palms and chrys-Washington winter. public property just yet. And nothing is more tiresome than the repetition of these things. The dancing class or, in fact, any other kind of a social concentration has been taken up so very kindly by several young ladies who have all the necessary executive ability to handle such an undertaking that it would be just as well to be looking up your second best ball gowns and other necessary equipment, for ball gowns and other necessary equipment, for the right set you can be pretty. The society belies and beaux of the monumental city are going to make the best of the opportunity. The whole scheme is a representation of the fete given at Paritz in honor of the queen's birthday. Miss Lulu Morris, Mrs. Powhatan Clarke, Mr. Columbus O'Donnell and Mr. Charles Carter are in the cast.

Senator and Mrs. Brice will entertain handsomely in the Corcoran house or else they would not have made it the palace, beautiful as it undoubtedly is. The democratic millionaire Sen-ator and his charming family have come here at a most propitious moment. Everybody re-members the hospitality the old mansion wit-nessed when Mrs. Cleveland was the guest there Lieut, and Mrs. Clover will be in their mansion before long, and they are going to enter-tain, as the latter is laying aside her mourning. The Leiters will undoubtedly be greatly missed. So will Mrs, Hammond, who is in mourning retirement for her mother, and Mrs Henry May, who is also in mourning and for the same sad reason. The Carrolls are off to Europe for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. J. Fairfield Carpenter are traveling.

One of the most fascinating subjects of conwersation just now among the ladies are their new clothes or their new ideas of winter finery. The trousseau with which the pretty bride of the diplomatic circle, Mrs. McBean, was provided, was full of tasteful and elegant selections. of bluish steel shade, that had a little silver of bluish steel shade, that had a little silver braid introduced into the trimming. The skirt, slightly trained, had side panels edged with the braid and a thickly gathered flounce which graduated in width toward the front. A smart costume of red and black bourette had the skirt slashed on one side to show a petticoat of red silk. The short jacket bodice had a vest of red silk embroidered very elaborately and high puffed silk sleeves tied justabove the elbow with a scarf of the silk. A dinner dress was of black satin, the skirt made entirely plain, and the short waisted bodice had a waistband of jet. Around the low neck was an effective drapery of black jetted lace. Butterfly bows of black lace, wired to stand up, were on the shoulders against the high puffed elbow sleeves. Among the et ming dresses was one of rose pink satin and a lighter shade of pink crepon trimmed with a yellowish lace—one of the prettiest things seen this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and their family are soon Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and their family are soon to go abroad, and will in all probability spend Christmas in merry old England. Mrs. and Miss Leiter are going to divide their time between London, Paris and perhaps the Riviera, while Mr. Leiter and the two younger daughters make the journey up the Nile. There has scarcely been a period in Miss Leiter's career when she was more admired than at present. She has legions of friends here, but just as many everywhere else, who will hear with regret that she will be absent this winter. regret that she will be absent this winter. There are a great many ladies among the resident families who have very pleasant memories of Mrs. Stevenson, and who are pre-pared to give her a genuine welcome when she comes here next March. Mrs. Stevenson held many pleasant informal receptions there. Their sons and daughters are now grown. The young ladies are both in society and are well fitted to adorn it. Neither Mr. and are well fitted to adorn it. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Stevenson are given to any social display and it is not likely that they will care to become distinguished in that way during their residence here. Mrs. Stevenson is quiet and retiring in manner and has the sweet, pretty expression that generally distinguishes that type of womankind.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Whittemore have returned to the city after an absence of eighteen months and will be at the Arlington during the winter. Miss Aline Wilcox, Mrs. Whittemore's daughter, who has been at Ogontz the past two years, will be with them and will be one of the debutantes of the season.

Senator and Mrs. Hale are back for some days in their 16th street home. Judge and Mrs. James will take their daughters down to Asheville to spend the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cumming have taken Judge James' house for the winter. Mrs. McKay has returned from New York, where she spent the autumn. Mrs. Lizzie Webb is in New York visiting her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Houston. Lieut, and Mrs. Clover expect now to get in their new house on New Hampshire avenue dur-ing December and to be comfortably established there by Christmas.

THE GAY SEASON.

The engagement is announced of Miss Florence Miller, daughter of the Attorney General, to Mr. Clifford Arrick of this city. This pleasant news will be intensely interesting to the friends of this couple. Thore has been no young lady in the cabinet circle who has been more popular and made a wider circle of genuine friends than Miss Miller. She is bright and entertaining in conversation, well read and clever in all womanly accomplishments and strong and devoted in her friendships. Mr. Arrick is certainly to be congratulated. This fortunate young man is now the private secretary for the Attorney General. He has a genial temperament that has made him scores of friends in the University Club and everywhere else where he has been brought in close contact. If the young couple after their marriage are to reside in this city, it will be additional pleasant news all around.

Yesterday at noon Miss Annie Beers gave luncheon to a party of friends at her home on East Capitol street. The dining room was made bright with ferns, chrysanthemums and roses, which were tastefully arranged, and each of the guests were the recipient of a bunch of La France roses. Those who enjoyed the lunch were Mrs. Moran, Miss Moran, Miss Mary Kealley, Miss Stockett, Misses McNantz, Miss Hardy, Miss Forbes, Miss Walker, Miss Rector and Misses Beers.

Among the numerous weddings which have made Thanksgiving week notable in this gay nuptial season one of the most interesting was that of Miss Minnie Travis of this city to Mr. Harry Lee Tansill of the Norfolk and Western railroad, a native of Culpeper, but at present stationed at Winston, N. C. The ceremony was celebrated Wednesday evening at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Rev. Joseph T. Kelly, the pastor, officiating. The house was well filled with gueste, and the foral decorations at the altar were of palms and obverpearls and swansdown trimming. Her maid of honor was Miss Annie Pitney of this city, who rison, Edward Moores and George W. Abbott. Mr. S. J. Morrow of Richmond gave the bride away.

Immediately after the ceremony at the Valentine's day, which will be also Shrove Tuesday. The regular season will, therefore, be short. Now, that is a blessing, especially this time, when there will be a rousing big inauguration ball about a week later.

There are some social events, of course, as certain as death and taxes. Among these neverchanging blessings may be enumerated the two or three assemblies and at least three or four other events by the Bacherlors and so on. Ten to one there will be a charity ball, for there would be nothing more regretted if it were omitted.

Immediately after the ceremony at the church a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Virginia Travia, at No. 617 13th street northwest, and the nouse was crowded with the friends of the happy couple. Among those in attendance from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Keister of Baltimore, Mrs. Kate Hicks, Mrs. Plynt and Miss Flynt of Culpeper, Va., and Mrs. L. M. Knote of Richmond, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Tansill at the close of the reception left for New York, where a part of their honeymoon will be spent. This morning's mails were made heavier by Prof. Schmid stated to the reporter that the snake belonged to the largest of the snake family. "They are without venom, but their immense muscular power enables them to crush within their folds large animals, which they first lubricate with saliva and then swallow whole by means of their enormously dilatable jaws. When I received him," said Mr. Schmid, "he was apparrently in a stupor, but the warm room where the monkeys live soon brought him around. I put a large rabbit in the cage with him and in put a large rabbit in the cage with him and in ten minutes he had been consumed. The funniest part of the whole performance was the way the monkeys acted when they caught sight of him. One of them, as soon as he spied the snake, emitted a peculiar noise unlike anything I ever heard before. The others took it up. and, the parrots joining in, pandemonium reigned. The monkeys were thoroughly fright-ened and hid themselves in the straw."

MR. JAMES N. R. KING CURED OF A SERIOUS NOSE AND THROAT TROUBLE AFTER THREE YEARS OF MISERY.

Mr. King resides at Brightseat, a suburb of Washington, and can be found at the O Street Market near the corner of 7th and Pats. He gives the following history of his case:

three years. At first I had dull pains in my forehead of my nose up to the top of my head. My nose wa there was great obstruction in my throat, which prevented natural breathing. My speech was thick and nasal, and persons could notice by my voice that and nasal, and persons could notice by my voice that there was trouble in my throat.

Two months or so ago I went to Dr. Jordan for treatment and the great change he has made in my case is remarkable. In a very few treatments I got great relief and my breathing improved at each treatment. That he understands such conditions goes without saying. His skillful handling of my case shows him bickory nut from the upper part of my throat with the slightest pain, since which time my voice has been as clear as ever it was. The doctor said it was rare to and a growth like that in the throat, but he seemed to know just what to do. I should be pleased to have persons who wish to be convinced to call and see me

OURS is the ONLY house in the District that sells EXCLUSIVELY for cash, and hence our prices are not made as other houses' prices must be, on the basis of the average losses resulting from the credit system. No other house, therefore, does or can afford to sell as cheap as we do.
A very unpaintable truth, isn't it? Shouldn't wonder if it didn't catch you in the very act of aguring up your almost certain losses, owing to the present state

R. H. SLATFORD, A WELL-KNOWN MR-CHANIC, BELIEVED OF A SERIOUS The noblest of arts is the art of healing the sick.

The noblest of arts is the art of healing the sick. To relieve pain, misery and suffering, to overcome disease, to restore to health and happiness the invalid whose life has become a burden from years of pain and distress, to step as it were between disease and death and recue the victim is the noblest of callings. The men who devote their lives to this callings are the sreatest of benefactors they are greater than they who create something merely pleasing to the eye or something purely meetal, because upon them we must who create something merely pleasing to the eye or something purely useful, because upon them we must depend in our extremity, and all other arts would be worthless had we not the peace of mind and comfort of body to enjoy them. People who have never been the victims of chronic disease do not appreciate the truth of the foregoing, but the subject of this sketch, Mr. R. H. Slatford, fully realizes the value of advanced specialism in the treatment of disease. Speaking of his disease he says: I have for a long time been aware that I had catarrh, affecting my nose, throat and stomach, which was indicated by frequent colds that stomach, which was indicated by frequent colds that kept my nose stopped up much of the time and a feel-ing of fullness over my eyes that was most disagree-able. I would get up of a morning with a tired, weary feeling and all out of sorts.

I was frequently hawking and spitting on accough that would come on of a morning and I raised a good deal of white frothy mucus that became yellow and offensive when I took cold. I feit oppressed and bloated after eating, and the fact of coming on made me realize that serious lung trouble was at hand, and reading of the numerous cures made by Dr. Newlin I placed my case in his hands and have steadily improved. My nose does not step up as before. My head is clear. I have no more night sweats. My stomach is releaved. My appetite is good. My cough has about ceased, and I feel better than for a long time. I am so well pleased that I cordially recommend by Kewlin to all. My address is 214 Jefferson st.
